TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 20, 1860.

HAWTHORNE'S NEW ROMANCE. It is eight years since Nathaniel Hawthorne last appeared before the public as an author. His new work is called "The Marble Faun; or, the Romance of Moute Beni," and is an Italian inspiration. He says of it, in a genial and pleasant preface, that he has LEGEND OF THE FOUNTAIN.

a century ago, or a thousand years, or be- sence can be traced for years aferwards. fore the Christian epoch, for anything that or sprite was a mystery; as was all else about her, except that her life and soul were somehow interfused throughout the gushing water. She was a fresh, cool, dewy thing, sunny and shadowy, full of pleasant little mischiefs, fitful and changeable with at their recent State fair, awarded "Baugh's Raw the whims of the moment, but yet as constant as her native streams, which kept the same gush and flow forever, while marble crumbled over and around it. The fountain woman loved the youth-a knight, as Donatello called him-for, according to the legend, his race was akin to hers. At least, whether kin or no, there had been friendship and sympathy of old betwixt an ancestor of his, with furry ears, and the long-lived ages, she was still as young as a May morntree, or a breeze that makes merry with the leaves.

For often as he to its absolute purity. sat waiting for her by the margin of the philadelphia, Sept 9th, 1858.—We have carespring, she would suddenly fall down around fully tested the sample of Chestnut Grove Whiskey one him in a shower of sunny rain-drops, with which you sent us, and find that it contains none a rainbow glancing through them, and forth- of the poisonous substance known as Fusil Oil with gather herself up into the likeness of a which is the characteristic and injurious ingredient beautiful girl, laughing-or was it the war- of the whiskeys in general use. ble of the rill over the pebbles?-to see the youth's amazement. Thus, kind maiden that she was, the hot atmosphere became ed knight; and furthermore, when he knelt down to drink out of the spring, nothing was more common than for a pair of rosy lips to come up out of its little depths and touch his mouth with the thrill of a sweet, cool, dewy kiss!

"It is a delightful story for the hot noon of your Tuscan summer," observed the sculptor at this point. "But the deportment of the water lady must have had a most chilling influence in midwinter. Her lover would find it, very literally, a cold reception.

"I suppose," said Donatello, rather sulkily "you are making fun of the story. But I see nothing laughable in the thing itself, nor in what you say about it."

He went on to relate that for a long while the knight found infinite pleasure and comfort in the friendship of the fountain nymph. | Would respectfully invite the attention of the Far- | the city. In his merriest hours, she gladdened him with mers of Maryland and Virginia to their large and her sportive humor. If ever he was annoy- varied assortment of ed with earthly trouble, she laid her moist FARMING IMPLEMENTS, hand upon his brow, and charmed the fret which they will be found prepared always to furand fever quite away.

But one day-one fatal noontide-the young knight came rushing with hasty and variety of irregular steps to the accustomed fountain. PLOWS AND CASTINGS, He called the nymph, but-no doubt because there was something unusual and frightful in his tone-she did not appear, Horse Powers and Threshing Machines, nor answer him. He flung himself down, and washed his hands and bathed his fever- Reaping and Mowing Machines, ish brow in the cool, pure water. And then singing of the brook over the pebbles. The water shrank away from the youths hands, Herds Grass Seed, &c. and left his brow as dry and feverish as be- GUANO, BONE DUST.

Donatello here came to a dead pause. "Why did the water shrink from this unhappy knight?" inquired the sculptor. "Because he had tried to wash off a bloodstain," said the young Count, in a horror-stricken whisper. "The guilty man had polluted the pure water. The nymph might have comforted him in sorrow, but could not cleanse his conscience of a crime."

"And did he never behold her more!" asked Kenyon.

"Never but once," replied his friend. "He never beheld her blessed face but once again, and then there was a blood-stain upon the poor nymph's brow, it was the stain his guilt had left in the fountain where he tried to wash it off. He mourned for her his whole life long, and employed the best sculptor of the time to carve this statue of the nymph from his description of her aspect. But though my ancestor would fain have had the image wear the happiest lock, the artist, unlike yourself, was so impressed with the mournfulness of the story, that in spite of her best efforts, he made her forlorn, and forever weeping, as you see." Kenyon found a certain charm in this simple legend. Whether so intended or not, he understood it as an apologue, typifying the soothing and genial effects of an habitual intercourse with nature, in all ordinary cares and griefs, while on the other hand, her mild influences fall short in their effect upon the ruder passions, and are altogether powerless in the dread fever fit or deadly chill of guilt.
